Volatility in the Ringgit and other emerging market currencies looks to remain elevated due to global monetary policy divergence and escalating trade tensions. Our long term view remains for USD to strengthen against Ringgit in view of more rate hikes from the US Federal Reserve. SGD also tends to track the USD over the long term. Hence, we will keep our currency allocation favouring USD, followed by SGD, with the remaining in Ringgit. The targeted allocation remains unchanged at 40%-60% for USD, 20%-30% for SGD and the remaining 10%-20% in Ringgit. The currency allocation may momentarily differ depending on the short term volatility in the currency markets. In terms of duration, we are keeping the average duration in USD and SGD portfolios short (around 3 years) and Ringgit average duration longer at around 5 years.
